Breakfast Club – Omer Lester

Visual Communication

What is visual communication? Why do we use it?

Visual communication is a modern, fancy name for graphic design. However, it's not just graphic designers who take part in conveying a message in a two-dimensional way. Whether you're writing content, building complex tables in Excel, or writing a birthday card for a colleague in your department, all of these require communicating with visual elements.

In this lecture, we'll go over seven of the cornerstones of visual communication and acquire tools for creating documents that transmit content in a clear, aesthetically pleasing presentation that is suitable for both the audience and the content.
